

Dear AASP Member,

We are updating our records and need to confirm whether or not you have an e-mail address. We are also mailing this letter to those of you we tried to e-mail, but were unsuccessful. If you do not have an e-mail address, please fill out this form and send it back, or call us at (800) 993-AASP to let us know. Then, in the future if you get one, please e-mail us so we can update our records.

If you do have an e-mail address, you can either fill out the form and send it back or e-mail us at unmarried@earthlink.net . Alternatively, you can call us at (800) 993-AASP to let us know.

We appreciate your interest and support. Keep watching as we continue to bring you information about the issues that affect you and your rights. Be sure to visit our website often at www.singlesrights.com for the latest news on our activities. We have added some new items, one of which is our "What's New?" section where we list the most recent additions to the AASP web site. If you haven't seen it yet, please visit at your earliest convenience.

Sincerely,
The AASP Team

Single ... But Not Alone

I do not have an e-mail address at this time.

I have the following e-mail address:

Call toll free: (800) 993-AASP

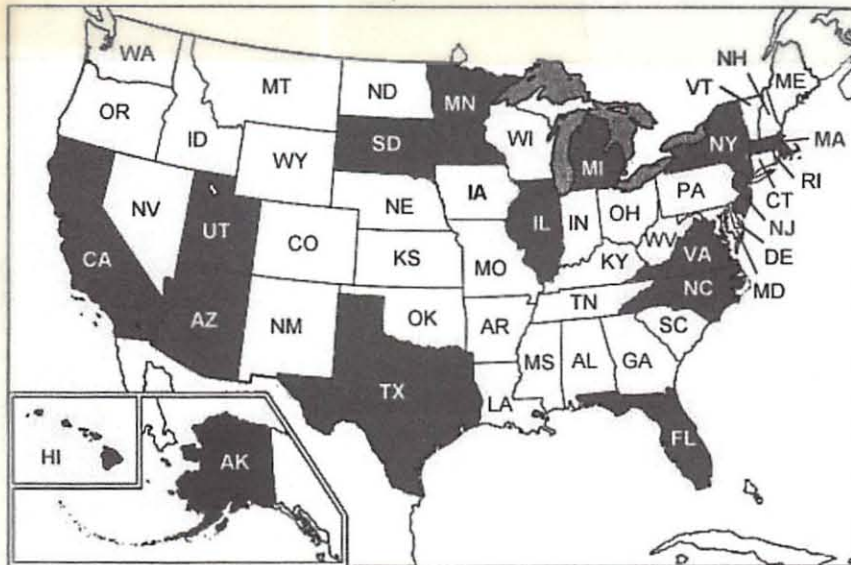

E-mail: unmarried@earthlink.net

Reach Out to Someone You Know

Send a Brochure to a Friend or Family Member Anywhere

or

Give a Gift Membership to Someone Who Lives Where We Don't Have Members

The states filled with red in the map above
are states containing AASP members

Currently, AASP has members in 16 states:

Alaska	Minnesota
Arizona	New Jersey
California	New York
Florida	North Carolina
Hawaii	South Dakota
Illinois	Texas
Massachusetts	Utah
Michigan	Virginia

GIFT MEMBERSHIP

To _____

From _____

In Honor of _____

Authorized by _____

Expires _____

PO. Box 65756
Los Angeles, CA
90065
(800) 993-AASP
www.singlesrights.com

Discrimination is Widespread

- Employees who are single or who have a domestic partner are paid less than married workers in terms of benefits
- Statutes and judges often refer to the children of unmarried parents as “bastards” or “illegitimate” and unmarried couples are stigmatized as “criminals”
- Insurance companies charge unmarried adults higher rates although they may be more responsible than many married folks
- The media often reinforces and perpetuates stereotypes that single people are selfish and that unmarried couples lack family commitments.
- Some landlords refuse to rent to single people or to unmarried couples.
- The government discriminates against unmarried people in areas such as child custody, foster care, adoption, and taxes

Discrimination is Widespread

- Employees who are single or who have a domestic partner are paid less than married workers in terms of benefits
- Statutes and judges often refer to the children of unmarried parents as “bastards” or “illegitimate” and unmarried couples are stigmatized as “criminals”
- Insurance companies charge unmarried adults higher rates although they may be more responsible than many married folks
- The media often reinforces and perpetuates stereotypes that single people are selfish and that unmarried couples lack family commitments.
- Some landlords refuse to rent to single people or to unmarried couples.
- The government discriminates against unmarried people in areas such as child custody, foster care, adoption, and taxes

What AASP is Doing

- AASP promotes cafeteria-style benefits and domestic partnership programs so that unmarried workers are treated fairly
- AASP encourages lawmakers and judges to use respectful language when they refer to unmarried couples and their children
- AASP challenges marital status discrimination in insurance and asks regulators to enforce legal protections
- AASP provides accurate information to journalists and producers to show that most single people and unmarried couples are responsible citizens and taxpayers
- AASP goes to court to protect the rights of single people and domestic partners in housing and employment
- AASP mobilizes single people and unmarried couples to speak out and to demand equal rights in all aspects of life

What AASP is Doing

- AASP promotes cafeteria-style benefits and domestic partnership programs so that unmarried workers are treated fairly
- AASP encourages lawmakers and judges use respectful language when referring to unmarried couples and their children
- AASP challenges marital status discrimination in insurance and asks regulators to enforce legal protections
- AASP provides accurate information to journalists and producers to show that most single people and unmarried couples are responsible citizens and taxpayers
- AASP goes to court to protect the rights of single people and domestic partners in housing and employment
- AASP mobilizes single people and unmarried couples to speak out and to demand equal rights in all aspects of life

Discrimination is Widespread

- Employees who are single or who have a domestic partner are paid less than married workers in terms of benefits
- Statutes and judges often refer to the children of unmarried parents as “bastards” or “illegitimate” and unmarried couples are stigmatized as “criminals”
- Insurance companies charge unmarried adults higher rates although they may be more responsible than many married folks
- The media often reinforces and perpetuates stereotypes that single people are selfish and that unmarried couples lack family commitments.
- Some landlords refuse to rent to single people or to unmarried couples.
- The government discriminates against unmarried people in areas such as child custody, foster care, adoption, and taxes

Discrimination is Widespread

- Employees who are single or who have a domestic partner are paid less than married workers in terms of benefits
- Statutes and judges often refer to the children of unmarried parents as “bastards” or “illegitimate” and unmarried couples are stigmatized as “criminals”
- Insurance companies charge unmarried adults higher rates although they may be more responsible than many married folks
- The media often reinforces and perpetuates stereotypes that single people are selfish and that unmarried couples lack family commitments.
- Some landlords refuse to rent to single people or to unmarried couples.
- The government discriminates against unmarried people in areas such as child custody, foster care, adoption, and taxes

What AASP is Doing

- AASP promotes cafeteria-style benefits and domestic partnership programs so that unmarried workers are treated fairly
- AASP encourages lawmakers and judges to use respectful language when they refer to unmarried couples and their children
- AASP challenges marital status discrimination in insurance and asks regulators to enforce legal protections
- AASP provides accurate information to journalists and producers to show that most single people and unmarried couples are responsible citizens and taxpayers
- AASP goes to court to protect the rights of single people and domestic partners in housing and employment
- AASP mobilizes single people and unmarried couples to speak out and to demand equal rights in all aspects of life

What AASP is Doing

- AASP promotes cafeteria-style benefits and domestic partnership programs so that unmarried workers are treated fairly
- AASP encourages lawmakers and judges use respectful language when referring to unmarried couples and their children
- AASP challenges marital status discrimination in insurance and asks regulators to enforce legal protections
- AASP provides accurate information to journalists and producers to show that most single people and unmarried couples are responsible citizens and taxpayers
- AASP goes to court to protect the rights of single people and domestic partners in housing and employment
- AASP mobilizes single people and unmarried couples to speak out and to demand equal rights in all aspects of life